We all want our children to be safe

The internet is a massive part of our lives today – from our jobs to our children's education and our downtime. As children grow up in a digital world with technology that's increasingly changing and developing at an extraordinarily fast pace it can be difficult to know how to start talking with your child about what they are doing online, who they might be speaking to or discussing the potential risks and issues. Are you aware of which games or apps are suitable for your child's age and the importance of keeping them away from games which might harm them in various ways? It is important that your child has a solid foundation for online safety and that you are aware of how you can help them.

We have put together some information which might help you to understand the positives and the dangers of a gaming and an online world which we will share with you over the next couple of weeks.

Here are a couple of links that might be useful as well for you to have a look at:

ABC online safety checklist for parents | Internet Matters

Teaching Your Child about Internet & Online Safety | NSPCC